THE WEEK BEGINS!

The Snider Campus has many departments and individuals that work together to create a home which is healthy and conducive to finding joy. What is it that keeps this place healthy? Let's just focus on one group, the Housekeeping staff. In times of an outbreak, such as influenza or other virus, the Housekeeping staff is tasked with disinfecting the environment. Cleaning goes beyond just making it look nice - it requires knowing how to rid our home of unwanted pests. This means using some chemicals and diligence in disposing of noxious waste. Every home will have waste and pests, but our home must take cleanliness to a higher level. Just as we practice "social distancing" to reduce the risk of the spread of the coronavirus, so too we must practice the highest level of cleanliness afforded by our housekeeping staff.

Ironically, the concern over the coronavirus has an impact on the environment. As activities slow down and change, the environment starts to rejuvenate. Images from space attest to the decrease in environmental pollution in cities in China and Italy. Perhaps, too, the change of pace and the decrease in public crowding will enable us to reevaluate our priorities here in Canada.

Let's continue to seek out the lessons from this difficult period as part of the journey to a better world. Shavua Tov! Have a good week!
