Acknowledgement

Each day, an increasing number of people take a moment to loudly acknowledge the health care workers and essential service workers who continue to do their jobs in spite of the potential danger. This is not only heartwarming for all front-line staff, it is also a way that we all can take action in this time of powerlessness. We can't visit our loved ones or congregate together, but we can make our presence known, like an answer to the virus: we are still here!

Perhaps one day we will all be able to recognize the work that everyone does, simply by choosing to live as responsible Canadians. Choosing to create a better world, every day, through the simple acts of ethical conduct. We make our presence known, and we acknowledge those around us. A normal day, of compassion and caring, and authentic acknowledgement.

"As we express our gratitude, we must never forget that the highest appreciation is not to utter words, but to live by them." John F. Kennedy
